Of Ladies Silk Hose Found On River Bank.

Three or four white fishermen accidently stumbled up on a pretty big given no notice himself and had not find on the river bank below the I. C. pumping station last Thursday afternoon. While climbing down the bank to the water's edge they saw a closed box hidden in a pi'e of driftwood and proceeded to break it open. Inside the box were ninety pairs of ladies silk hose. This find caused them to look around for something else but their quest was without results.

Believing that the hosiery was hidden there by Wiley Ellis, the negro now in jail charged with breaking open a freight car, they carried the hosiery to the I. C. depot and turned it over to the agent, Thos. L. Mor-

Western Kentucky Tobacco Patches.

Committee Organized at Henderson.

Henderson, Ky., June 18.-Volunteers were armed and sent to the tobacco patches of Western Kentucky today to halt night riding after the organization of a vigilance committee, which numbers nearly 400 members, here. The committee's leader is a man who is said to have been one of the Ku-klux Klan of postbe lum days. The armed volunteers will attempt to check interference with tobacco planting. Organization of the committee re sulted from frequent recent clashes between warring tobacco interests—those who do and those who do not seek to restrict the tobacco acreage.

Editions of The Journal which has rigorously objected to methods of the night riders were issued today under armed guard, after a plot to wreck the newspaper's plant had been frustrated.

Work Has Lasted More Than Thirty Years.

Sir James Murray Tells of Scope of Undertaking, and Difficulties of Compiling Oxford Lexicon-Be Finished in 1917.

In an old English garden at Oxford, away from the hurry and strife of affairs, the wonderful architecture of the new English dictionary silently approaches completion, says the London Post. More than thirty years has this treasure house of the language been in building.

Many of the first enthusiasts have passed away, Dr. Furnivall and Professor Skeat among them, but the master builder, Sir James Murray, abides still at the task, his natural strength unabated, it would seem, notwithstanding his seventy-six years. Summer and winter he rises at six o'clock in the morning and works at the dictionary the day through.

In the preparation of the first section of volume X (Ti-Tombac), which has just been published, Sir James worked ninety hours a week for three months. The history of "to" with the Asked as to the probable date of completion of the dictionary, Sir vive. James had an answer which gave him obvious pleasure.

"I have got to the stage when I can estimate the end," he said. "In all probability the dictionary will be finished on my eightieth birthday, four years from now. My colleagues, Dr. Bradley and Dr. Craigie, are busy with 'S,' and I have penetrated into the second half of 'T,' which I expect to complete in two years. By that time

"At first we calculated that the dictionary would run into eight volumes. That calculation was made on the basis of existing dictionaries, Johnson's Revenue receipts for the sale of and, in particular, Webster's; but we small and great."

Asked about special difficulties and problems which have arisen in the course of his labors, Sir James had much to say. He referred to that elusive class of words whose parentage cannot be traced; they defy the telescope of the lexicographer.

"Whenever we write down 'etymolweeks of study have been spent without other result. Every conjecture made as to the possible origin has een carefully tested and abandoned before we write that final epitaph of

Sir James' spirit of devotion to the building of the dictionary impresses every visitor to his garden at Oxford. While he impatiently suffers the mere interrupter, Sir James pays a warm tribute to correspondents in Britain and in many parts of the world who are helping on the work. He made special reference to the librarians of law. The ordinance is not retroact- the library of congress at Washington and of the Boston Athenaeum for turning up and copying passages from American books not in English public Grape Bags for sale at this libraries. There are a hundred others to whom, he said, the thanks of himself and his colleagues were due. To all these the completion of the Oxford dictionary will be a great festival, memorable in the annals of literature

Where the Best Man Fails.

Evidently a school of training is needed for groomsmen. A parish clerk, who has been officiating for thirty-seven years at a London West End church, famous the world over for its numerous society weddings, declares that groomsmen are rather noted for absentmindedness. In particular, the man in that position, fails to look after the bridegroom's hat, and left to himself, nearly always lets the bridegroom go away hatless.

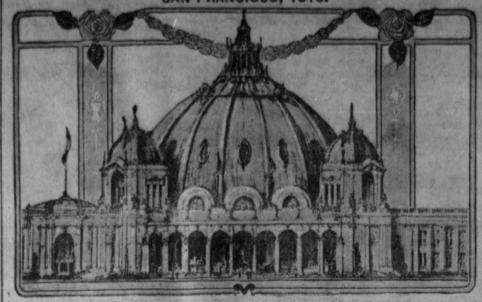

"Why," continued the old clerk, when Mr. Asquith was married-four prime ministers signed the register; Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Balfour, Lord Rosebery, and the bridegroom himselfhis hat was left behind in the vestry, and his best man was no less important a person than Lord Hal-Mr. Asquith wears a very large-sized tobacco. hat, very difficult to replace. Lord Kitchener I have seen as best man once. But if I had not kept vigilant watch, the bridegroom would have gone away bareheaded."

Utilizing the Waste.

In the city of Brussels, the school children were asked by their teachers to gather up as they came and went from school such apparently valueless objects as old metallic bottles, capsules, tin cans, tinfoil, paint tubes, refuse metal and deliver the same into the keeping of their teachers. Within eight months they collected: 1,925 pounds, 220 pounds of old paint tubes, 1,221 pounds scraps of metal, total, 7,-781 pounds. This heap of rubbish was

English Sounds That Way to Miss Li-Bi-Cu.

Chinese Woman Physician Speaks It Fluently Herself Now, but the First Impression Remains-Superstition in Healing Art.

Do you know what your English language sounds like to me?"asked Miss Lu-Bi-Cu, a Chinese physian who is in America to take a post-graduate course at Johns Hopkins university. "It sounds like bird talk.

"The missionaries used to laugh at me when I told them that, but it is literally true; and even after I learned the language and have been speaking it for years English still reminds me of the mysterious and muscial chirping and chattering of the birds. The first time I heard missionaries talking their language I asked, 'Do they talk the birds' language?' And when I told them, 'Now you know what the birds say,' they thought it a great joke. I think English is beautiful, though difficult to learn; but no matter how much of it I know I cannot get away from my first impression."

Miss Li took up the study of English when she was sixteen years old and spent four years studying the language and the branches allied with it and necessary to a liberal education before she took up the study of medicine at the Women's Medical college in Philadelphia. She spent four more years in the medical school, and in 1905, at the age of twenty-four, went back to China to begin her work of healing the sick. She expects to return to China in April, after a year of post-graduate study in Baltimore.

Dr. Li came to New York to address missionary gatherings in the interest of a medical college in Peking with which she has been connected. She says this college is one of the most promising agencies of progress in China today, because through it Chinese young men and women may be trained in modern medicine without undergoing a long preliminary training in English. There is enormous need for trained physicians in China," said Dr. Li. "We have today one western trained physician to 1,500,000 population. If you had that proportion in the United States it would mean that you had in this entire nation just 88 doctors. In China, with its population enormously greater than yours, and with its multitude of medicine men whose cure is worse than the disease, the problem is enormously complicated.

"The reigning emperor about 3,000 years ago evinced great interest in medical healing. He personally spent much time experimenting with herbs, classifying them according to their supposed cures. All of these herbs were listed in a book which the emperor compiled, but he never organized a school, and while the knowledge he had gained by his experiments may have been valuable and really efficient for healing, the lack of a school to train the coming generation lost much of what the emperor had gained. But he did leave his book with the list of curative herbs. If anyone wanted to become a doctor, all he did was to read through the Book of Herbs and announce himself a qualified medical healer.

'The worst kind of abuses grew out of this. The disease was not as bad as the cure in many cases. The medicine men treated with tiger skins, snake skins and leopard skins as well as with herbs. They had a great many superstitions about appeasing the spirits.

"I remember the case of a young boy who had convulsions as a result, apparently, or indigestion. The medicine man who was called in took a needle, threaded it, pushed it into the boy's stomach as far as it could go. left it there for three hours, and then pulled it out by the thread. There the evil spirit was made to escape, as he believed.

"Another person had a severe cold, perhaps it was the grip. The medicine man stuck needles into the nails of the patient in order that the cold might escape. Little babies two and three years old were treated by pricking their gums with needles. Sometimes these raw places on the infants' gums were rubbed with rock "The treatment for a baby who cries

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series-an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.

DIAMOND DILUN PIN ft for the world. But never mind, I'm sure I shall find it again."

It Held a Pink Carnation Which Fulfilled Its Purpose in Life.

It took several minutes to extricate them, but to his delight their owner found that they had not been hurt. When he had righted the wagon and got his team once more within the traces, the farmer suddenly thought of his companion in misfortune and hurriedly drove back to find him. David lay unconscious from the wound on his head. it. but the farmer managed to lift him into the wagon and drove as speedily as possible to a Brantford doctor. It was in the doctor's spare bedroom that the young man regained consciousness.

The scalp wound made him feverish; and after a day or two it was thought best to send word of his accident to the Mortimers. Thus Doris came at once to nurse her big brother. It was the thought of him which had brought the terars which caused her own tumble.

Dr. Rogres' house was a short distance from the station and Doris was shown at once to David's room.

"Doris! How good it is to see you -I didn't know they had sent word about my smash up.

Doris kissed him wherever she could find a place below the bandage. "You look as though you had been on a regular orgie-I never expected to see my immaculate brother making such a disreputable appearance. But as little Alice said when her brother had chicken pox "I love you just the same, even if you are ugly." David laughed for the first time since his disaster. "Always something cheerful even for the battered-you are a dear girl Doris," and he squeezed her hand.

"I hope you will find your pin, girlie, for I know how you value it. And did Mona really send me a flower?" There was ill concealed delight in this question, and Doris answered teasingly:

"You dear old goose; don't you suppose I know what that means to you? Yes she surely sent you one of her big pink carnations, and wanted me to teil you it bore her sympathy and the hope that you would soon be all right."

"I see that my wise sister can't be deceived. So I may as well own up that I feel the loss of that flower quite as much as you your pin."

Doris gave him a loving pat, and incease for the present. David had no return of fever after his sister's arival, and Dr. Rogers considered him one of the most cheerful and tractable patients he had ever at-

Doris came down. She recognized Stephen and gave a cry of delight as she saw what he was holding out as he advanced to meet her.

"I did not want you to think me a pickpocket, Miss Mortimer. I have tried my hardest to return this to you-and you cannot imagine what a load it lifts from my conscience to do

"Thank you so much. I have mourned over the loss of Daddy's pinthough of course I did not let David see. I suppose you haven't the carnation too?" The question was asked eagerly, for Doris remembered what David had said about its loss.

To her dismay Stephen Lorimer blushed up to his hair. "Yes-es," he stammered. "I have it with me-did you want it?"

"Only for David-" hastily explained Doris. "A dear friend sent it to him, so it was not really mine to lose.

"Then I return it willingly." Stephen drew a leather case from the breast pocket of his coat, and took from it a withered pink carnation. Doris tried to look very matter-of-fact as she took it, and succeeded only in blushing divinely.

"My friend McArling told me of your brother's misfortune-don't you think I might cheer him up a little if came to see him now and then, Miss fortimer?"

This proved a master stroke, for to was Doris' only thought. The pink carnation had fulfilled its purpose in life, and two weddings which occurred within the ensuing year could be directly charged to its account.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Before the close of the eighteenth century Kew gardens were generally admitted to possess the finest variety of plants in Europe Till then this distinction was claimed both by the Paris Jardin des Plantes and the Upsala Botanic gardens.

Kew gardens had one sight a century ago which cannot be paralleled in modern London. Sir Richard Phillips, after a visit in 1816, tells how, "as I quitted the lane, I be held on my left the long boundary wall of Kew gardens; on which a disabled sailor had drawn in chall the effigies of the whole British navy, and over each representation appears the name of the vessel and the number of her guns. ### AND THEY SIT IN JUDGMENT

Critics, If They Did But Know It, Do Not Always Cover Themselves With Glory.

The average critic who sits in judgment and catalogues faults and frailties of those who come his way is about as well equipped for the position as a woman who was overheard talking to another at a table in a downtown refectory last week. A third woman had just left the two rather hurriedly, excusing herself to keep an appointment, and as she took her leave she laughingly remarked to one of the others:

BATTER FOR LITTLE CAKES

Really the Best of All Forms of This Preparation for Home-Made Delicacies.

The following recipe for cake batter can be used with good results in the yolks of two eggs and beat. Gradually add half a cupful of flour, sifted with two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Lastly add the beaten whites of the eggs.

When the batter is mixed divide it into four parts. To one part add chopped nut meats, to another a dash each of cinnamon, grated nutmeg and allspice, to another orange extract and half a teaspoonful of grated orange rind and to the fourth part half a teaspoonful of vanilla.

When the cakes are baked, cut and cool frost them. Prepare a stiff icing of the whites of raw eggs beaten stiff and confectioners' sugar. Beat the icing until it is creamy and smooth. Flavor it with a little vanilla and trost the nut cakes and the spice cakes. In the center of each nut cake place a nut meat or a candied cherry. Place small strips of citron on the spice cakes, in designs, if desired. To some of the white frosting add a beaten egg yolk and a drop or two of orange extract, with a little more sugar, and with this frost the orange cakes. A little candied orange peel can be used to decorate these cakes. Melt grated chocolate with confectioners' sugar, beat it carefully into the remaining white frosting and ice the plain cakes.

LEAVING MUCH TO CHANCE

Old-Time Cooking Directions Were Not Very Specific as to Portions to Be Mixed.

The modern housewife, who apportions her foods and mixes cakes and cookery recipes with mathematical precision, can find nothing more amusing than some of the vague directions by which the old-fashioned cook of several generations ago prepared foods. These random sentences. taken from a little cook book that belonged to the great-grandmother of a Baltimore girl, suggest pointed examples:

Take whatever quantity of rice you think proper, according to the size of your family; boil it in good broth and some lard; when cool mix it with as much flour as rice, a good deal of butter, some eggs to hold it together, and make a puff paste of it. Form into hot cakes of whatever shape and bigness you please, and

If your fire is not very quick and clear when the poultry is laid down to roast, it will not eat near so sweet or look so beautiful to the eye.

According to the goodness of your fire, your meat will be done sooner or later.

A few eggs, a little milk, a pinch of salt, sweetening to taste, flour to thicken, a good beating, and bake according to judgment. (These are directions for a breakfast bread.)

Jellied Cucumber Salad.

Three cups cucumbers cut into small blocks, 1 cup white wine vinegar, 1 ounce gelatin, 1 large bay leaf, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon peppercorns, 2 blades mace, mayonnaise dressing. Soak the gelatin in 1/2 a cup of cold water for half an hour. Put the bay leaf, pepper-corns and mace into a saucepan, add 2 cups of boiling water, cover the pan, simmer for 15 minutes, strain and measure the liquid. If there is not a cupful and a half, add sufficient water to make that amount. Turn in the gela- 18c. tin, stir until dissolved and add the vinegar. Stand away until cold, but not stiffened. Arrange the blocks of cucumber (which should be free from seeds) in small molds and pour over them enough of the gelatin preparation to cover well. Put in the refrig erator to stiffen and serve.

Snow Pudding. Three tablespoons of cornstarch, moisten with a little cold water, and stir into pint of boiling water. Put one-half cup of sugar into water, also little salt. Cook and remove from stove, stir in whites of three eggs beaten to a stiff foam. Set away to cool. Serve with this custard: To a pint of boiling or hot milk add the three yolks well beaten, teaspoon cornstarch and one-half cup sugar, flavor and put away to cool. If you want something truly delicious, try this.

Fried Brains and Sour Sauce. Clean and wash in cold water two sets of calves' brains, handling carefully to prevent breaking. Fry in butter until light brown and remove to serving dish.

Sauce-Place one teaspoon butter in a very hot pan and pour in slowly half a cup boiling water, adding parsley and garlic chopped fine. Let boil a few minutes and then pour in enough vinegar to give sour taste. Pour over brains and garnish with parsley and thin slices of lemon.

Tomato Soup.

One quart can tomatoes, one pint of hot water will be needed. Let come to a boil; melt one tablespoonful of butter, blend with two tablespoonfuls of flour, stir into boiling mixture, add seasoning. Boil for ten minutes and run through sieve.

Pork Chops With Apples. Place the chops and slices of tart pples in a frying pan with a little hot fat, unless the pork is fat. Salt (and trial and you will be satisfied. pepper if you like it), and fry brown both choos and apples.

A Splendid Tonic.

Cora, Ky.-Mrs. Iva Moore, of this place, says: "I was so weak, I could hardly walk. I tried Cardui. and was greatly relieved. It is a splendid tonic. I have recommended little cakes: Cream half a cupful of Cardui to many friends, who tried it butter with a cupful of sugar. Add with good results." Testimony like this comes unsolicited from thousands of earnest women, who have been benefited by the timely use of that successful tonic medicine, Cardui. Purely vegetable, mild, but reliable, Cardui well merits its high place in the esteem of those who have tried it. It relieves women's pains, and strengthens weak women. It is cetainly worth a trial. Your druggist sells Cardui.

Biscults Are Those With Flavor of Walnuts.

Walnut Biscuits-Delicious and uncommon biscuits for afternoon tea may be made from the following re-

One pound of flour, four ounces of butter, the same quantity of sugar, one egg, and three ounces of finelychopped walnuts.

Beat butter and sugar together, adding the egg, thoroughly whisked. Stir in the flour very gradually, working it into the other ingredients till all becomes a smooth yellow paste. Turn walnuts with the fingers.

Roll out, cut into shapes with a fancy cutter, and make in a slow oven for half an hour. Walnut Roll-Shell and skin four ounces of walnuts and chop very small, place one pound of icing sugar in a bowl, adding part of the white of one egg and a dessertspoonful of wamanner till all the nuts are added.

Mix in five drops of almond flavoring, and turn the mixture onto a sugared board. Knead with the fingers and shape into a roll. Put away for several hours in a cool place till thoroughly set, then cut in slices and arrange on fancy dishes.

If a bag of sulphur is kept in the bird cage it will drive away lice in hot weather.

Left-over jelly of several different kinds mixed together can be used for cake filling. Do not put salt in the water in which peas are cooked. It will cause the skins to crack. When rubber gloves wear into holes try mending them with surgical adhesive plaster. Try adding a leaf of spinnach to water in which peas are cooked; they will keep a good color. Rub brown sugar on a sliced ham before boiling it. The ham will have a delicious flavor.

Maryland Fried Chicken.

Have the chickens dressed and on ice for at least twelve hours before cooking them. Dust each piece with salt and pepper and flour well. Have an iron frying pan half full of lard and smoking hot; then put in the chicken, cover and let cook for half an hour, turning from time to time. When tender, and a rich crisp brown, pour the fat from the pan and add a large tablespoonful of butter and let brown; then stir in a tablespoonful of flour and stir smooth. Pour in a cupful of rich milk or thin cream and stir and cook until you have a smooth, creamy sauce. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Arrange the chicken on a heated platter with fried strips of cornmeal mush around it; add a little curly parsley, and serve the sauce in a separate dish.

Washington Pie.

One-quarter cup butter, one cup sugar, two eggs, one-half cup milk, one and one-half cups sifted flour, one rounding teaspoon of baking powder. The way in which this is put together is a little unusual, but if you can follow the directions I think you will be pleased with the result. Cream the butter and sugar by hand, add the eggs one at a time and slap them in by hand. Then use a spoon and add milk and most of the flour and beat well. Add the baking powder sifted with a little of the flour, and do not beat much after adding it. This makes a fine-grained, light cake.

Rhubarb Wine. Put the stalks through a meat chopper. Measure five pounds and add a gallon of cold water, a halfounce of gelatin, and the grated rind of a lemon. Let stand three days and then add three pounds of sugar. Let it ferment as long as it will, filling up for evaporation. Bottle and seal .--Suburban Life.

Flavoring Bouquet. A kitchen bouquet for flavoring soups can easily be made. Take a few sprigs of parsley and wrap them around pepper corns, whole cloves, a bay leaf and other herbs that are at hand. Tie up tightly. This can be removed from the soup without trou-
